Meet Neymar

At school, seven-year-old Neymar used to hide extra food from the lunchroom in his backpack to take home to his family when they didn’t have enough to eat. His teachers would often notice that he was tired, hungry, and unable to focus during lessons.

But with the help of his school’s Parent Liaison, Neymar’s family was enrolled in CFBNJ’s Family Pack program. The regular access to nutritious food has greatly improved his engagement level and academic performance.

“We’ve noticed with Neymar that he’s become more focused in the classroom,” said Ms. Branco, the principal of Neymar’s school. “He’s paying more attention in class, fostering more relationships with his peers, and playing more often on the playground.”

Neymar, his two siblings, and his mom moved to Newark recently. At the school he attends, the Family Pack program has been especially helpful for immigrant families, like Neymar’s, by connecting them to resources they might not otherwise have access to.

Now, Neymar can often be found sneaking to his cubby to eat the extra fruits he receives from the Family Pack distributions.

“I love the different fruits we get that I can share with my family,” Neymar told us. “That’s my favorite part about the Family Packs.”
